Greater Awareness of International Responsibilities Urged by President

President Horowitz gave the following Report to Convocation on 4 June.

Eminent Chancellor, Mr. Associate Chief Justice, other distinguished guests, colleagues, those of you who are graduating this afternoon, and your families and friends.

I am pleased to report on this first day of Convocation. When by Thursday afternoon students graduating in the remaining Faculties join those of you graduating this afternoon in Agriculture and Forestry, Engineering, Pharmacy, Rehabilitation Medicine and Science, the total will reach almost 4,000. I want to congratulate all of you who have completed your studies and also your families who have been of support to you and my colleagues who have prepared you.

Mr. Chancellor. After 10 years of service to the Faculty of Rehabilitation Medicine, Dean Wilson will be stepping down from the deanship to return to full-time teaching and research. Dean Adams, who served as Dean of Engineering for almost eight years, has already moved to another important assignment of great interest to the University. He is the first President of C-FER (the Centre for Frontier Engineering Research) which is a joint venture of this University, the Government of Alberta, the Devonian Foundation and a number of private firms. On behalf of the University I would like to thank Dean Adams and Wilson for their valued service as Deans during a sometimes difficult but always challenging time.

Two of the vice-presidents with whom I work so very closely will be completing their terms this summer. Vice-President Baldwin has served as Vice-President (Academic) for five years and Vice-President Phillips as Vice-President (Facilities and Services) for nine years. The University is grateful to these two very loyal people who have been here for a total of 75 years and I am indebted to them personally for their support and for their valued friendship.

Each academic year has its many challenges and inevitably, its several frustrations, and 1983-84 was not a disappointment in this regard. As if the forces that guide universities realized that we would need some excitement following the "high" we all experienced during our 75th Anniversary Year which culminated with the Special Convocation for Prince Charles and the World University Games, this session began with the largest number of first year and transfer students we have ever had and a total enrolment of more than 23,000 full-time students who together with the part-time degree students represented more than 25,000 full-time equivalent students. Universities, like other institutions in this province and across the country, have been affected by the economic situation and so at one and the same time we have been attempting to accommodate large numbers of additional students and we have been eliminating too many permanent academic and non-academic positions.

The difficult decision we made this past winter and spring to limit enrolment has received extensive and fair publicity. It must be so very obvious that as individuals committed to university education we want all people who are interested and qualified to be able to benefit from university studies. But as one institution we are limited as to how much we can do. The last few months have been stressful ones, Mr. Chancellor, but the agony and the misery of the difficult enrolment and budget decisions, that affect present staff and students as well as individuals who would like to become staff members or students, have been tempered considerably by the strong support I have enjoyed within the University from the Chairman, the other members of our Board, and the academic community, and also by the sympathy and understanding of people outside the University.

About the International Dimension...

About two months ago I received a telephone call from the mother of a grade twelve student. She was concerned that her daughter might not be admitted and she asked whether I thought it was fair of us to continue to admit international students when qualified Albertans will be excluded. We spoke just briefly and I hope quite amicably and I do think that after about five minutes of conversation she was satisfied with my explanation. Certainly, she said she was. Mind you, like any concerned parent she added, understandably, that she still hoped her daughter would be admitted. She suggested that I say publicly a few things about the international dimension and I intend to do so this afternoon.

During the last two weeks we had with us guests from Japan, the widow and a son of the late Dr. Yuichi Kurimoto. In 1926 Yuichi Kurimoto, a young man of 22, was admitted as a transfer student in Philosophy. When he graduated in 1930 he was the first Japanese national to do so from this University. He went on to establish schools and a university in Nagoya, Japan, and to become one of the educational leaders in his country. He returned to this campus from time to time and in 1964 we granted him an honorary degree for his service to education and also for his devotion to this University. Over the years he and his family made many contributions of books and artifacts. I met him in the Fall of 1980 when he returned for his 50th Reunion. Unfortunately, he died one year later. His family continue to be benefactors of our University. Just a week ago they made a generous donation to the Japanese Garden which has been named in Dr. Kurimoto's memory. My wife and I were guests of the Kurimoto family this spring when I addressed at their university two groups of students about to begin their post-secondary studies. I was surprised and very touched to see that their university flag includes the Canadian maple leaf and that their university colors are also green and gold. But these are just surface examples of the very strong and positive feelings for Canada, for Alberta and for this University that were evident.

Not all students—Canadian or international—will be as successful and devoted as was Dr. Kurimoto. But who knows what bonds of friendship and understanding will be cemented when a student comes here from a foreign country.

The truth of the matter is that we do not have too many students from other countries. For several years our aim has been for international students to represent approximately 5 percent of the enrolment in quota programs. We admit as many as 5 percent only when the foreign students whom we are accepting appear to be better qualified than the Albertans who are being excluded. And now that of necessity we are moving in the direction of limits on enrolment in all of our programs, we can anticipate that the percentage of the total University enrolment represented by international students will drop from the present 7 to 5 percent. Compared to several other Canadian universities 5 percent is quite low: the fraction is about 25 percent at the University of Windsor and Simon Fraser University, about 15 percent at McGill and York Universities, and more than 10 percent at the Universities of Guelph, Ottawa, Toronto and Manitoba and at Carleton and Concordia Universities.

I am pleased that the situation with regard to the international dimension has improved since I last dealt with this topic at Convocation in the Fall of 1980. The President's Committee on International Development, chaired by Associate Vice-President Amy Zelman, has been instrumental in shaping a number of proposals. Our Board of Governors established both an international student bursary fund and a number of scholarships for students from developing countries. The Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) was so impressed with the initiative taken by our Board that it is providing matching funds that have enabled us to increase the number of awards. Next year we shall have about 12 students on these special scholarships and in a few years we shall have a total of 20 scholarship students at different stages of their studies. To date scholarship students have come from countries such as Sierra Leone, Ghana, Sri Lanka and China and they are studying in a variety of academic fields including engineering, agricultural engineering and rural economy.

International Students' Centre

In a few weeks we shall be opening our first International Students' Centre. It will be a modest setting in an old University house in East Garneau, but it will be a place for international students and their guests to gather. We are hopeful that CIDA will provide the funds to enable us to appoint a program coordinator for the Centre.

Throughout the life of our University, individual members of staff have made important international contributions. Many of my colleagues in Faculties represented at Convocation this afternoon have been involved in projects in other countries. With income from a special endowment gift, we are providing modest funds for the support of international development activities in the initial, exploratory stage. The Alberta Government through AID is making available matching funds for some of these projects. Already, we have assisted a number of activities in countries such as Botswana, Uganda, Thailand, Chile and Guyana.

CIDA is funding one of its Canada-China Briefing Centres at this University. The Centre will provide the necessary orientation for Canadians who are going to China and for Chinese coming here.

Last Tuesday I met the more than 20 individuals from eight different countries who are participating in the 12-week Alberta Summer Institute for Petroleum Industry Development. With support from governments, industry and United Nations agencies, we are providing educational and field experiences to the engineers, planners, project managers and civil servants from countries such as Indonesia, Thailand and Pakistan—countries that are beginning to develop petroleum industries.

We have had on our campus this past session dozens of scholars from other countries as visiting distinguished professors and in a nine-day period from 30 April to 8 May of this year we were visited by the Chairman of the Board of Hokkaido

Slavic Collection Befriended

Rutherford Library contains one of Canada's major collections of books and journals relating to the history, languages and literatures of Slavic Europe. The Friends of the Slavic Library Collection Society was formed recently. The goals of the Society, which has been incorporated under the Alberta Societies Act, are: to support and maintain the Slavic Collection of the University of Alberta Library through fund raising activities and donations; to enhance awareness of the Slavic Collection of the University of Alberta as a resource facility for the study of Alberta's ethnic heritage.

Those wishing further information on the Society and its activities should approach Peter A. Rolland, Department of Slavic and East European Studies, or Alan Rutkowski, Cameron Library. □

Forest Society Elevates Endowment Fund

In the spring of 1982 the Undergraduate Student Forest Society in the Faculty of Agriculture and Forestry donated $1,000 to the University to endow an award. The award recognizes the fourth-year forestry student who attained the greatest increase in grade point average between the second and third years of study, while maintaining a passing average.

The Forest Society, through its 1983-84 President, Nora Kopjar, recently donated an additional $1,000 to the endowment fund. In both cases the funds were raised by students' participation in such activities as Christmas tree sales. □

University in Sapporo, Japan, the President of the Chinese University of Hong Kong, the former Minister of education in Thailand, and the High Commissioner of Kenya.

I am proud of the commitment of many of my colleagues to the numerous projects in other countries and of the accomplishments of many of our international students. Dean McDonald of the Faculty of Science will be in France later this week to work on a collaborative research project. When I was in Japan two months ago I became even more aware than I was previously of the many activities in that country involving colleagues in agriculture, pharmacy, medicine, physics and chemistry. Our interest in the international dimension must go beyond this type of involvement, however. Are our Canadian students sufficiently aware of global concerns and of the many advantages of country-to-country contacts? Following the most recent annual meeting of premiers of the four western provinces, Premier Lougheed indicated that it was necessary for universities to take more seriously the preparation of people to function at the international level. Mr. Chancellor, I support the Premier in what he said. (Could it be that my endorsement received no publicity because the several people from the media who interviewed me on this topic expected me to disagree with the Premier and that they decided that my strong approval did not make a good story?) We must look at all of our programs and ask ourselves whether we could be doing more than we now are in preparing teachers, economists, business administrators, agricultural specialists, engineers and other professionals to contribute to and to benefit from involvement in other countries and with people from other cultures.

A Priority Issue

In an early draft proposal our Planning Group IV, the Planning Group on Program Initiatives under the chairmanship of Dean John Bachynsky of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences, presented the following as a priority issue for this University:

With the increasing shift of Alberta's economic future to the Pacific Rim, there is an expectation that the University will provide the technological and intellectual base for this endeavor. One facet of this would be to expand the Department of East Asian Studies Programs. Others would be to encourage the exchange of staff and students with universities in East Asia.

We are attempting to do this in a very serious way. More than a year ago the four universities through our Universities Coordinating Council submitted a detailed proposal to Advanced Education. We remain hopeful that it will receive a positive response. In the meanwhile, paralleling the special relationship between Alberta and provinces in Japan, China and Korea, this University has entered into agreements with universities in these countries. Several members of staff, including the Vice-President (Research), have visited China; a number, including the present Dean of Education, have visited Korea, and others of us, myself included, have made recent trips to Japan. More than a dozen of our students of the Chinese language will be studying in Heilongjiang, China, this summer and, at the same time, several of our students will be perfecting their Japanese and learning about Japan while at the University of Hokkaido.

Did you read the editorial titled "Est-ce que vous parlez Japonais?" in last Monday's issue of the Edmonton Journal? A number of important points were made about our need as Canadians and Albertans to take more seriously dealings with Asian countries. Very few Canadian officials or businessmen who go to the Pacific Rim countries are able to communicate in the languages of the people to whom they want to sell goods and services. The editorial concludes by emphasizing that it is crucial that we build links with Asia. I agree. The final sentence is a challenge to us. "Will the universities join in with adequate Asian language programs and a focus on Asian Trade?" And I answer publicly in the editorial called the President's Report to Convocation that we are attempting to do so and, with appropriate support from governments and the business community, we shall become even more vigorous in our efforts.

We hope we are being helpful to other countries and their people when we educate foreign students and when we participate in developmental activities away from Canada. What we know for certain is that the involvement of our country and of our University in international matters is in our own very best interest. We in Alberta know that it is essential that we have a better sense of our belonging to a world community. Increased international trade and cultural and educational exchanges will result in a better life both for the people with whom we trade and for us all.

Mr. Chancellor, I have reported today on only one of this University's many areas of interest. I have done so because I believe that without our neglecting the large number of students from Alberta whom we shall continue to admit, and without our ignoring matters local and provincial, we should concentrate more than we have on one special mission of a large, complex and high-quality university such as ours—that is, to continue to aim to become a truly international institution, and to see ourselves and to be seen by others as a University responsive to the needs of the many communities of which we are part—sensitive to local, provincial, regional and national needs, to be sure, but also aware of our international responsibilities.□

George Baldwin: Leave Taking is Nigh

Dame Fortune was a visiting professor at this University in 1951. George Baldwin, having received his MA from the University of Toronto, was about to be gainfully employed at Carleton University. The only problem was that he wasn't enamored of the distance that lay between that institution and his beloved hometown, Vancouver. When the chance to come to Alberta at a sparkling $3,700 per annum presented itself he took it and, with characteristic deftness, extricated himself from the Carleton contract. His career, which would span 20 years as a teacher and active research scholar and another 14 years as an administrator, was on wheels and destined to be blessed by "unfailing good luck." Of course luck, as a wise man once said, is the residue of design.

George Washington and the cherry tree have little on George Baldwin and the spruce tree. The newly-arrived lecturer and his wife were scouting around for a Christmas tree in what they perceived to be the countryside. The light was failing but just before darkness set in they spied "a beautiful spruce of just the right proportions." Upon felling it, their blood ran cold when they noticed a brass plaque identifying the occasion when Chancellor McNally had planted it just west of the President's residence. "The tree still lies there for all I know," Dr. Baldwin was heard to say at the recent gathering of the Friends of the University of Alberta.

He quickly grew accustomed to "a country at the outer edge of most known things" and began a "teaching orgy that would only end 20 years later, in University administration." Trudy Plunkett, now in the Department of Medicine, worked with Dr. Baldwin for more than six years and was impressed with his manner of teaching freshmen. "He was a most conscientious and dedicated professor and seemed to delight in his teaching," she recalled. "I particularly remember the manner in which he marked his students' examinations. So as not to be prejudiced against any student, I was asked to turn down the edge of the paper that showed the student's name."

Offers from other universities were mulled over by Dr. Baldwin early in his career but they "didn't measure up to what I already had." Also, he was "an incurable westerner." "Close and abiding friendships were readily made. That was characteristic of Edmonton, I think, more than most places, probably for the reason that we had to rely on each other more than in larger centres, as we still do, for that matter, though the boom that was then about to begin has now carried our city to full maturity."

After several years of teaching, however, he realized that he was starting to do things by rote and was ready to recharge his intellectual batteries. A strong believer in "picking up one's marbles before the game is over," he was and is deeply appreciative of the fact that a faculty member can acquire a number of different kinds of career experience. "It's a blessing for the University that doesn't exist in the business world. With such a rich range of activities, there is no reason why faculty members can't do work which they can be happy in."

In 1966 he was selected to be Chairman of the Department of English. As luck would have it he was on study leave at the time and (happily) missed the attendant politicking. He had thrived on teaching but found it very difficult to be, in sports parlance, "up" for lectures.

When asked to serve as Chairman of the Department of English he displayed little if any of the reluctance that befalls many academics when they are approached to don an administrative hat. The chairmanship proved to be a good training ground for the position of Dean of Arts which he gravitated to in 1972. He found the position of Dean easier than that of Chairman, appreciating in particular the opportunity of being able to influence the course of events.

In and around his three major appointments (he assumed the position of Vice-President (Academic) in 1979) he served on every high level committee save the Board of Governors' Building Committee. As a Vice-President he was a "headquarters strategist" always doubly happy in his work because his colleagues were also his friends. "It's an extraordinary institution to work in," he told Folio last week. While it's the only job he's had as a working adult, he's visited a great range of universities and talked with their people. "It's a very generous place and just about as enlightened a place as an institution can be. It has never benefitted at the expense of others."

In a university, the least administration is the best, Dr. Baldwin feels. He adhered to the take-the-job-very-seriously-but-not-yourself philosophy.

In his term as Vice-President he is proud of the role he played in the development of the President's Advisory Committee on Campus Reviews; the cooperative effort with President Horowitz on shaping the terms of the Endowment Fund for the Future, particularly the conditions for the McCalla Professorships; and the development of the writing competency requirements. As one who likes to work on details, he found the rationalization (vacancies, budgeting and recruiting) for academic position control very satisfying.

The general overhauling of the Faculty Agreement was another task that Dr. Baldwin was pleased to be associated with. There were few bêtes noires. Had he his druthers, Dr. Baldwin would have been "quicker off the mark" as regards middle and long-range planning for the University. And, of course, it was a difficult five years from a resource point of view.

The ultimate satisfaction? "If there is a perception among the Deans that there has been fair play as far as this office is concerned."

Dr. Baldwin has his year's administrative leave mapped out. ("The likelihood is that I won't be back.") He intends to make himself computer literate and will take courses at UBC. "I wouldn't have chosen a different career; I don't want to do anything more in a university." What about outside a university? It turns out he harbors thoughts of writing a weekly column called "A Stranger in Town" and of hosting a talk show on radio. Anyone who has had the privilege of hearing a Baldwin riposte at meetings of GFC, Senate, the Board of Governors, et al. could provide sterling references to a station in the market for such an individual. □

Positions Vacant

The University of Alberta is an equal opportunity employer but, in accordance with Canadian Immigration requirements, these advertisements are directed to Canadian citizens and permanent residents.

Sessional Lab Coordinator/Demonstrator, Department of Chemistry

The Department of Chemistry invites applications for the position of Chemistry 312 Laboratory Coordinator/Demonstrator. This is a half-time recurring sessional position (September-May) requiring someone with a chemistry degree and, preferably, experience in Chemistry 312.

Duties include organization of the Chemistry 312 lab operations, including marking and recording, handling registration and scheduling, and demonstration of one laboratory section per week during the full instructional term. Considerable individual troubleshooting of experimental work and results is involved. Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Applications, including a curriculum vitae and the names of three references, should be submitted to Gordon Weir, Personnel Officer, Department of Chemistry, University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2G2. This competition will remain open until a suitable applicant is found.

Sessional Lecturer, Educational Foundations

Applications are invited for a one year sessional appointment, 1 September 1984 to 30 April 1985, in the Department of Educational Foundations. Applicants should have proven ability or demonstrated potential for teaching Educational Foundations 301, Education in Canada: Selected Topics; and Educational Foundations 361, the Sociology of Learning and Achievement. Other qualifications being equal, preference will be given to candidates who have experience in teaching in these areas.

Applications, accompanied by a curriculum vitae showing qualifications and related experience, should be sent no later than 22 June 1984 to: Dr. R.J. Carney, Chairman, Department of Educational Foundations, 5-109 Education North Building, University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2G5.

Coordinator, Committee for the Improvement of Teaching and Learning

The University of Alberta requires a Coordinator for the Committee for the Improvement of Teaching and Learning. Among the responsibilities of the incumbent will be the maintaining of a human resources and audio-visual resources file relating to the improvement of university teaching and its evaluation, the organization of workshops and seminars, and the coordination of a system of individual consultation for improving teaching.

The salary for an initial 11-month appointment will be $21,000, commencing 1 August 1984.

Applicants ideally should possess a higher degree in an academic field, and have some experience teaching in a post-secondary institution.

Applications, with a curriculum vitae and three letters of reference, should be addressed to Professor Jeanette Boman, Chairman, CITL, 3-118A Clinical Sciences Building, University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2G3, and be received by 29 June 1984.
